

The Wait of the Harvest

News flash! Something incredible has taken place on earth. Population has surpassed 6.4 billion. Our world now boasts of 440 megacities with more than 1,000,000 inhabitants each. What an awesome opportunity! With such impressive prospects, why am I experiencing sleepless nights? Why this nervous awareness that the waiting harvest is slipping through our hands? Why the haunting dreams of untouched cities? Why do images of lost souls pass through my mind like power point presentations?

The weight of the world lingers inescapable every minute of my day. I can't get away from it! I am consumed with reaching the world. This is the day of the church. God wants to give us revival that we cannot imagine. But, He expects wise and proper stewardship. Capable, anointed workers must be trained to facilitate the end-time outpouring the Lord has promised.

What's the big deal? Jesus identified it. There is a gigantic crop, but few reapers (Luke 10:2). No workers. No harvest. It's as simple as that! The solution is as obvious. We need more trained preachers to carry the truth to the waiting billions. Overseas Bible schools and training programs emerge into the spotlight. Such endeavors exist solely to train and equip the workforce for the harvest. Through the years you have given sacrificially to build Bible schools, and support foreign students. Thanks for joining hands with our missionaries to train men and women. Keep it up! We are going to reach our world. How? Training workers for the waiting harvest!
